HEAVY SELLING MOVEMENT DEPRESSES COTTON PRICES

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.-The cotton market opened 2 to 6 points lower, which was rather disappointing, in view of the cables from the market at Liv-There was a heavy selling movement, which was partially explained by the estimate for a yield of 11,684,000 sionals took advantage of the decline to cover shorts, but the decline continued until January touched 9.81. Some particularly large covering orders came in at 9.62 for that option, and checked the drop at 9.61. Rains in Southern States were expected to have some effect on the movements. The market being largely speculative paid little attention to this influence.
